What’s up at the lighthouses

There’s news at all three of our lighthouses this summer. Public tours have resumed at Harbor Light and we’re working on a new landscaping plan -- we want the walk from the street to the waterfront to be as exhilarating as the experience out at the light! With your support, an architectural team examined Race Rock in mid July and is preparing a plan to guide historic preservation work going forward. And here, below, is latest news about Ledge Lighthouse.

Progress at Ledge Lighthouse – Compliments of the Coast Guard

In an effort to improve energy efficiency and reduce maintenance costs, the USCG Research and Development Center (RDC) located in New London has been developing and testing LED technology to replace the current incandescent light technology in all lighthouses that remain in use. This work continues today with the RDC’s LED laboratory being one of the most advanced sites in the USA. For New London Ledge Lighthouse, this upgrade has been recently completed. This is 3rd generation technology that will continue to be a beacon of safety for mariners entering the Thames River.

In 1909 when the lighthouse was commissioned, the state of the art was a 4th order Fresnel Lens. Using a whale oil lantern as the light source, the Fresnel lens magnified the unique intermittent white/red flashing beacon. The original Fresnel lens is currently on display at the Customs House Museum.

The second generation light source was installed in 1987 using a 33 watt incandescent bulb that operated 7/24. The Ledge Lighthouse Foundation is currently working with the Coast Guard to acquire that light technology for display. The new LED was designed, unlike previous technology, to require no magnification. In addition, unlike incandescent or fluorescent lighting, LED lights never “burn out” but simply begin to lose their luminosity (brightness) over a long period of time. Chartered tours to the Ledge Lighthouse Museum can be arranged through the Ledge Lighthouse Foundation by calling 860-391-3364. Information for smaller tours is available at nlmaritimesociety.org.

In May, the first RE-ORG in the US took place at the Custom House, led by the system’s guru, Canadian Simon Lambert. In Canada, many of the museums are small community museums with a one or two employees, like the Custom House.

The RE-ORG Method is a step-by-step approach to storage organization that helps to reorganize a museum’s collection storage rooms, focusing on the creative, yet safe, use of existing resources.

This method was originally devised by ICCROM and UNESCO and has been used all over the world in 151 institutions and over 30 countries.

Twenty+ volunteers achieved a magical transformation of our overstuffed collections room. All the ‘other’ objects -- i.e. packing supplies, extra display items, items with no place else to go -- were removed from the space, as were the actual collections and collections cases. Everything was cleaned, sorted, organized, packed in storage boxes, then somehow -by 5 pm- reassembled into a room that now feels twice as large.

Conservators can spend years working on their own to preserve a single object. This project was an opportunity for volunteer-professionals to learn something new, work with colleagues, be part of a dramatic project, and do good. It was a great opportunity for NLMS.

The RE-ORG process taught us a lot, and now sets NLMS on a path to receive grants and thereby continue to improve our collections care at the Custom House. We thank Simon and his team for a job well done and much appreciated.

In June, Emma Vlaun of East Lyme High School won the 25th annual NLMS Reid MacCluggage Black Maritime History Essay Scholarship for her creative ‘fireside chat’ about one of the first American heroes of WWII, Doris ‘Dorrie’ Wells. Another winner that night - behind the scenes - was her writing coach, Roseanne Hardy, who has been teaching in East Lyme for 52 years!

At this time of year, we can get a little lighthouse crazy, so it’s nice to see that we’re not the only ones. New to our museum collection is a postcard / fan from 1912. The scenes are all of New London -- the Old Mill, the courthouse, the Soldiers and Sailors Monument on the Parade. But the predominant image here is New London Lighthouse. --Good choice!

We hosted Benny Dover Jackson Middle School Summer Camp Rotary in July and made model Amistad ships! NLMS hosted the group without charge. All of our NL public school programs -- including the year-long, third grade, Local History & Landmarks classes -- are funded by us, through a combination of grants and private donations, with no reimbursement from the NL Public Schools or the City of New London. It’s important to do & we’re happy to help.
